As a leading global provider of criminal information management systems, ABM will be exhibiting at two major international conferences in the first half of 2009.

The 2nd Annual European Serious Organised Crime Conference in Liverpool (UK) from 9 – 10 March 2009 aims to build links between senior police officers and key law enforcement personnel from across Europe. An impressive list of speakers will highlight strategy and best practice in relation to terrorism, organized crime, gang recruitment, gun crime, financial crime and human trafficking.

ABM's software is used by many police forces to help target organised crime. From storing intelligence information, to managing human intelligence sources, ABM's software is pushing the boundaries of law enforcement software.

The International Conference for Police & Law Enforcement Executives in Halifax (Nova Scotia, Canada) from 19-21 April 2009, is centred around the theme of "Executive Challenges in the Global Environment", highlighting the importance of re-examining and re-creating law enforcement organisations to address emerging problems. Thirty key-note speakers from police chiefs and private law enforcement organisations will also cover four sub themes: "global environment", "organizational realities of the future", "labour issues on the horizon" and "work-life balance: myth or reality".

With constantly changing demands being placed on law enforcement organisations around the world, the need for modern and adaptable software solutions is greater than ever. Recent media coverage of high profile court cases in North America has highlighted a major challenge in intelligence-led policing: maintaining integrity and protecting confidential informants' identity and safety. abmpegasus™ leads the world with its comprehensive and secure solution for managing covert intelligence operations, including confidential informants (covert human intelligence sources).
